

User Interface Design Feedback

Template:

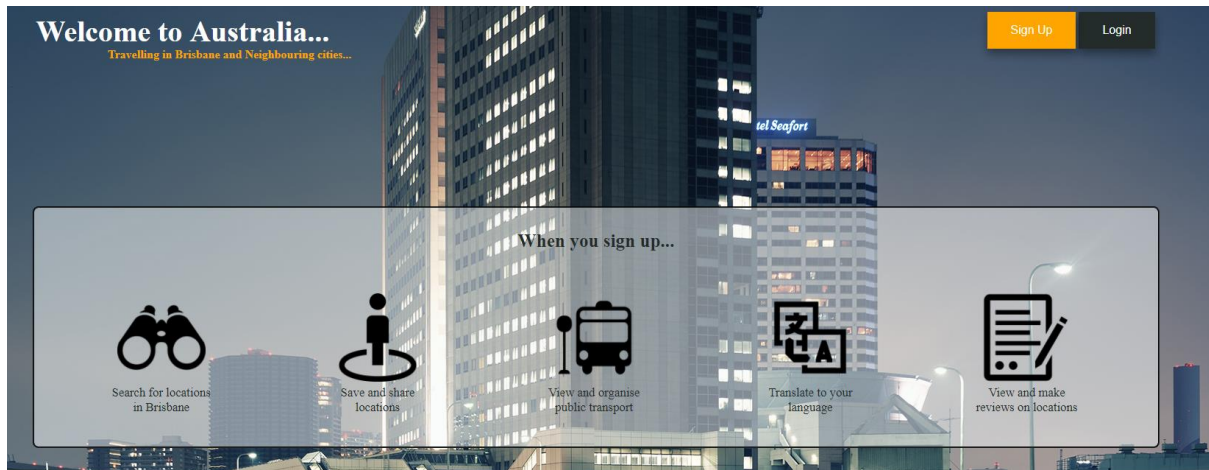

Location: Where am I?

Current Status: What's happening — and is it still happening?

Future Status: What will happen next?

Other comments:

Welcome Page

Location: The current page is quite unclear. A title needs to be added to show the user why they are being displayed this information.

Current Status: With both the sign up and login buttons visible, the users attention is drawn to the signup button. The current status appears to be you must sign up for the website for some reason.

Future Status: The future status of the user is made apparent by the guiding texts which inform them of basic features of the website.

Other comments: The page needs more information on what the website is about. Without a body of text explaining what smartcity is about, users will have no clue why they are even on the page.

Login Page

Location: The current page is clear. The login text clearly informs the user they are on a login page.

Current Status: The user can tell they are signing up for the website currently.

Future Status: The buttons tell the user that they can either login to the existing account or if they are a not a member then they can sign up.

Other comments: The font leaves a lot to be desired. Also disliking the black outline of the less opaque window.
